

Two Prison Officials Killed When Western Penitentiary Convicts Dash for Liberty

John A. Piper, Assistant Warden, and Sergeant J. T. Coax Shot Down.

DAMP DYNAMITE FAILS

"Bad Eggs" From Eastern Penitentiary Fire One Charge But Dynamite Prevents Detonation of Others; Charge Fails to Break in Walls.

By United Press.

PITTSBURG, Feb. 11.—Well laid plots of men and kings sometimes go awry and that was the case today when two guards were killed in rioting at the Western Penitentiary, temporary home of 1,100 convicts.

Because a little bit of fuse attached to 10 sticks of dynamite was damp, the entire south wing of the prison still stands and its prisoners are still behind its walls.

After an hour of fierce fighting, in which the entire police department of Pittsburgh had a part, Warden Egan announced the end of his preliminary investigation.

A band of "bad eggs" recently brought here from the Eastern Penitentiary, where they had caused much trouble, had in some manner gotten possession of 20 sticks of dynamite and a small quantity of guns and ammunition.

As these prisoners were being marched to their places this morning they attacked Assistant Deputy Warden John A. Piper, lone guard at the entrance and shot him. This brought guards from the south end of the prison running to the scene, leaving that part of the structure unguarded.

While the fighting at the north end was at its height, a tremendous roar shook the south end of the building, and the struggling guards discovered the cause.

But the explosion was not of sufficient force to shatter the south wing and result in a general delivery. Warden Egan said. Ten sticks of dynamite had let go but the other 10 failed to go off because of a damp fuse connection.

PITTSBURG, Feb. 11.—Two prison officials were killed today when 100 convicts at the Western Penitentiary made a dash for liberty, following an explosion in the lower end of the institution.

The dead are: John A. Piper, assistant deputy warden, of Duquesne, and John T. Coax, yard sergeant, of North Side, Pittsburgh.

In the rush Sergeant Coax was loaded and one of the prisoners seized the officer's revolver from his holster and shot him. The same convict is alleged to have shot and killed Piper with the same revolver.

In the confusion the prisoners made their way to the prison yard where they battled with the guard. After city police and sheriff's officers arrived, however, the situation was brought under control and at 10:15 quiet was restored.

When the prisoners made their dash into the yard guards covered the walls and a hurry call brought the riot squad, armed with tear gas bombs, and every available policeman and the sheriff's office to the penitentiary.

Over 1,100 prisoners were confined in the prison and while only 100 were relieved from the cells to escape the fumes, the remainder put up a terrific howl that brought nearby residents to the outside walls.

The only weapon the convicts got was the one stolen from Sergeant Coax. No other officers were injured, and no prisoners are missing.

Miss Margaret Moran, telephone operator at the prison's private switchboard and the only female employee, was sent from the institution to her home as soon as the trouble started.

A report not confirmed by prison officials said the explosion was caused by dynamite, planted by convicts working in the yard of the penitentiary.

To support this theory the report said that the so-called "bad men" brought here from the Eastern Penitentiary recently were the instigators of the plot.

The two explosions tore a hole large enough for an average man to pass through in the inner wall of the building.

Walking by Passing Train, Smithton Man Awakes in Hospital

William Pfeiffer of Smithton is a patient at the Connellsville State Hospital today with a bad wound of the scalp and forehead and a fracture of the right arm. He was admitted early Sunday morning and an operation was necessary.

The man said he was walking along the tracks near Smithton when a train passed him. He knew nothing more, he declares, until he awoke in a doctor's office. He believes something fell from the train and hit him.

ROBERT S. LATIMER, WELL KNOWN HERE, DIES IN PITTSBURG

Last week marked the passing of Robert Latimer, 78 years old, of Pittsburgh, who for over a quarter of a century was an outstanding figure in the work of the Western Pennsylvania Missionary Society of the Christian, or Disciple Church. His funeral took place Saturday afternoon at the First Christian Church, Northside, Pittsburgh. The service was conducted by the pastor, Rev. Wallace Thurgood, with Rev. Noel Jones of Uniontown, D. Park Chapman, Rev. E. A. Cole and Rev. P. A. Bright also taking part. Benoit Boyd of Trotter was one of those in attendance at the service.

Mr. Latimer died Wednesday in an automobile while going home to the rooming from his place of business. He had been engaged in the whole sale tea business for 42 years. Twenty-eight years ago, at a convention of the Western Pennsylvania Missionary Society in Connellsville, he was elected president. He had held that office ever since. At the time of the dedication of the new plant of the Christian Sunday School here last October he spoke briefly.

The next meeting will be held on Saturday, March 1, at East McKeesport. At that time more definite steps toward preparing for the convention will be taken. The convention this summer will be held at Somerset.

Negro Gets Pay Of 10 in Bold Daylight "Job"

Returning from a Uniontown bank with $650 in cash, belonging to fellow employees, on him, Louis Vittek, a well-known railroad man, employed by the Pennsylvania Railroad at Ralney Junction, was held up at the city limits of Uniontown, and robbed in broad daylight by a negro.

The employees of the railroad had just received their checks and as Vittek was going to the bank 10 of them gave him their checks to get cashed. He secured the money and was returning when he was held up.

The negro covered him with a revolver, took the money and ordered the man to walk up the railroad tracks, threatening to shoot him if he turned around or attempted to run. When Vittek had gone 50 yards he turned around and saw the colored highwayman, described as being nearly six feet tall, getting into an automobile. The railroad man believed the machine was driven by a woman. The car was driven in the direction of Uniontown and although an immediate alarm was raised the robber escaped.

Corporal Maclean and Private Weber, attached to District Attorney Brown's office, armed with a search warrant, visited the store of Rocco Sordella at Lehighing No. 1 Saturday afternoon. A search of the room failed to reveal anything. As they were leaving the officers noticed a loose board which, upon being lifted, revealed two and one-half gallons of moonshine and containers for 15 gallons more, according to the officers. Sordella, who had lived there for a year, declared he knew nothing of the liquor. He was held for court under $1,000 bail.

Worship Followed by Sunday School Is Working Well Under New Plan at Scottdale Church

Special to The Courier.

SCOTSDALE, Feb. 11.—A plan on which Rev. W. C. Work, pastor of the United Presbyterian Church, spent much time and thought has been put into operation whereby the old order of Sunday school, followed by morning worship, has been reversed. Yesterday was the second Sunday the plan was in operation and increased attendance was noted. It was said.

Mrs. Work, wife of the pastor, is acting in conjunction with her husband. After the opening exercises, conducted by the pastor, in which all join, the primary and intermediate departments of the Sunday school go to the basement where a sermonette is delivered by Mrs. Work. During this period the pastor delivers the regular sermon for the adults.

At the close of the sermon and sermonette all go to class rooms for the study of the Sunday school lesson. Following the study all reassemble and the closing exercises are conducted by the superintendent of the school.

Under the new arrangement the joint service begins at 10 o'clock. At least a half hour is saved, it was said. Other churches of the town—the Baptists and the Christians—are considering joint services.

Going over old documents found among the effects of the late J. S. Newcomer of Morgan, R. F. Klingensmith, who purchased and now owns the old Newcomer store building, found numerous agreements, promissory notes and other instruments, some of them over a century old. John S. One yellow of preservation is in agreement for the transfer of 410 acres of land situated along Mountain creek in Bullock township, from the estate of Isaac Connel, represented by Edward Chambers and John Galloway, executors, to Abraham Newcomer for $3,900. The said tract adjoined the lands of Martin Meyer, John Pippert and others. The agreement was witnessed by Daniel and Joseph Rogers and was made in 1815.

A receipt dated November 16, 1849, and signed by J. W. Phillips reads: "Received of John Newcomer, administrator of the estate of Utah Newcomer, deceased, $40 in full for coffin of Nancy Newcomer, deceased."

Another dated October 26, 1838, reads: "Received of the estate of Abraham Newcomer by the hands of Utah Newcomer, $6 in full for coffin for deceased." It was signed by Dirmann Herbert.

Man Will Harness Sun, Wind, Tides, Edison's Prophecy

By United Press.

WEST ORANGE, N. J., Feb. 11.—Thomas A. Edison started out on his 78th year today with his customary birthday kick into the air to prove his inexhaustible youth, plenty of hard work and the usual quiet meetings with friends.

Celebrating his 77th birthday by arriving at his office before any of his employees and punching the time clock as usual, the electrical wizard finally was persuaded to give his views on current subjects of interest. In response to a question he said:

"Man has not yet reached but is rapidly approaching physical perfection. When coal and crude petroleum resources are exhausted power will be extracted from the sun, the wind, the tides and vegetable growth."

R. F. KLINGENSMITH'S AUTOMOBILE DESTROYED

Black-firing is believed to have caused the destruction of the five-passenger automobile of R. F. Klingensmith of Morgan Saturday morning along the Keeler-Owensdale road near Flatman. Mr. Klingensmith had been to Scottdale and was returning.

The vehicle became fast in the mud and while he was endeavoring to get out smoke began to pour from under the hood. When the driver lifted the hood to ascertain the trouble there was an explosion which knocked him down, dazing him. When he got to his feet the whole machine was ablaze.

The road has been in a bad condition. Handling coal in trucks has resulted in it being badly cut. Constable Martin Gerke had several times notified the supervisors to make repairs. It was said. It is understood they will go to work on it again.

MAYOR DENIES FLAG STORY

Mayor C. C. Mitchell this morning denied that he had ever been interviewed by any representative of the Junior Order of United American Mechanics in regard to flying the flag at half-mast from the city flag-pole.

He said that immediately he heard of Woodrow Wilson's death he notified the city hall and 15 minutes afterwards the flag was up.

Later a complaint was registered at City Hall about this flag being torn but the mayor declares no one ever mentioned the matter to him. It is pointed out that because of the location of the pole every flag raised on it is quickly made ragged because of the wires in which it is blown.

Mine Wage Scale Parley Under Way At Jacksonville

JACKSONVILLE, Feb. 11.—Peace in the bituminous coal industry depends on results of a wage scale conference that opens here today. Bituminous miners of the Central Competitive Field, comprising Illinois, Indiana, Ohio and Western Pennsylvania, are to meet with operators to negotiate a wage scale to take the place of the one expiring March 31.

John L. Lewis, of the United Mine Workers of America, Philip Murray, vice-president, and William Green, secretary, headed the miners.

Eight operators and eight miners' delegates from at least three of the districts completed the negotiating body.

It was uncertain today whether Western Pennsylvania operators would attend. They opposed an agreement for the entire field, urging separate district and state negotiations. President Connelley and Secretary of Commerce Hoover have urged them to attend, so as to cover the whole field with an agreement and thus avoid danger of any break in mining this spring.

Another possible stumbling block is the duration of the new agreement. Miners want a four-year contract in the interest of continued peace and stabilization. Operators have not officially indicated their position.

STRIKE AT HERRIN MAY COMPLICATE TENSE SITUATION

United Mine Workers Demand That Klansmen in Ranks Be Ousted.

STATE TROOPS HOLD SWAY

Town Under Military Rule but Civil Authorities Dictate Procedure in Keeping Down Disorder; Klan Leader Assumes Role Police Chief.

By United Press.

HERRIN, Ill., Feb. 11.—"Bloody" Herrin was a military camp today, with 14 companies of National Guardsmen under full arms patrolling the streets to prevent further bloodshed in the conflict between dyes and wets—the Ku Klux Klan and anti-Klan forces. Fear of a strike of several thousand miners complicated the situation today. Members of the United Mine Workers of America declared they would not tolerate Klansmen in their ranks. Many of the miners are Klansmen but the bulk of them are said to be ready to strike until the Klansmen are ousted.

Adjutant General Black is determined there shall be no repetition of the massacre of June, 1923, when 25 union and non-union miners were slain.

Herrin is under "military law" which differs from martial law in that the military is not in absolute control of the town. Under military rule the troops are technically subordinate to civil authority.

Limited military rule was extended to Marion and Johnson City with the arrival of 10 more companies over the week-end.

Troops in Marion and Johnson City are inactive for the present. Sheriff George Galligan, who called the troops following the slaying of Caesar Cagle and the shooting of Deputy Sheriff Layman, was held captive in the city hall here by the followers of Glenn Young, dictator of Herrin, who ordered Galligan's arrest for Cagle's murder and then proclaimed himself chief of police. Young held his ground in the city hall, which he fortified with machine-guns, in the face of opposition of the sheriff, Coroner William McQueen, who demanded the custody of Galligan.

Herrin today in an armed camp. Hundreds of miners have quit work and thronged into this exclusively coal mining town of about 15,000, with the result that many of the mines have closed on account of lack of labor.

Troops patrolling the streets have made no move to enforce order by force, their only function so far having been to lend their moral support against further violence.

CHICAGO, Feb. 11.—One thousand National Guardsmen from Chicago are on their way to Herrin, Ill., and should arrive about 2:30 o'clock this afternoon.

Orders for the troops, the 132nd Infantry, to move were received last night and the soldiers, including three machine gun companies, en-trained shortly after midnight.

Beauty Congress Meeting in France Sounds Death Knell of Bobbed Hair

PARIS — Bobbed hair, like hooped skirts, is passé. For months the style has been dying a painless death. Now it is officially laid to rest by the International Hairdressers' Congress, the recognized style group. In telling its death knell, experts declare "all Europe has quit bobbing and the mademoiselles with short locks are wearing transformations." Reports from American beauty experts also show bobbing is on the wane and "in six months will be atrociously unpopular, if not in utter bad taste."

Accordingly, three new modes of hairdressing that permit the wearing of false hair will prevail among women of taste in 1924. They are the Empress Josephine, with hair drawn back and a cord or band around the temples; Louis Philippe, with elegant curls clustered around neck and ears, and Empress Eugenie, with two bands across the forehead and curls falling over each ear. Transformations, dainty worn, will be covered with reliable invisible human hair nets now used for all evening and dress wear. Great demand for hair nets, it is declared, was one of the first signals of the passing of bobs, over sixty million Galushoborgs being sold in 1923.

"Bobs are gone, but after all, who cares?" sighed the chairman in adjourning the congress. "Permanence, chorus, the deluge. Which means Nobody."

A CLEAR COMPLEXION

Ruddy Cheeks—Sparkling Eyes—Most Women Can Have

Says Dr. Edwards, a Well-Known Ohio Physician

Dr. F. M. Edwards for 17 years treated scores of women for liver and bowel ailments. During these years he gave to his patients a prescription made of a few well-known vegetable ingredients mixed with olive oil, naming them Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets. You will know them by their olive color.

These tablets are wonder-workers on the liver and bowels, which cause a normal action, carrying off the waste and poisonous matter in one's system.

If you have a pitiful face, yellow look, dull eyes, pimples, coated tongue, headaches, a listless, no-good feeling, all out of sorts, inactive bowels, you take one of Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets right after meals and see the pleasing results. Thousands of women and men take Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets—the successful substitute for calomel—now and then just to keep them fit. 15c and 30c.

For about 11 years, he was employed at the plant of Davis, Porter & Company. Previous to that he was for two years at the Park car shops at Everson. Mr. Kohl was a member of the German Lutheran Church. He is survived by his wife, who was Maria Prinsler of Pittsburgh, and two children, Barbara and George Frederick, at home. His mother, Mrs. Barbara Kuster, also is living.

The funeral will be Wednesday, at 2 o'clock from the home, with service at 2:30 at the German Lutheran Church. Burial will be in Hill Grove Cemetery.

EIGHTY SCOUTS LISTEN TO TALK ON DISCIPLINE

One of the biggest turnouts of Scouts for a Sunday service here in observance of the anniversary of Scouting in America, attended the United Presbyterian Church yesterday morning and heard Dr. Francis J. Scott, the pastor, preach a sermon, especially prepared for the occasion the 14th birthday of Scouting.

Troops Nos. 5 and 8 had the largest attendance, with about 25 boys each. There was an approximate total of 80 boys in the reserved section of the church. The Scouts, mostly in uniform, met at their various meeting places and marched by troops to the church where they occupied a front section.

The subject of Rev. Scott's sermon was "Discipline."

The church service ended the formal observance of the anniversary of Scouting here. A week is generally given to this occasion but this year no plans were made for any other features.

White Lily Sausage for Dinner

To make excellent sausage like White Lily, great care is necessary and an exact formula must be followed—that is why White Lily always tastes the same—but the same delightful aroma and flavor.

This is secured by using only the tender ham and loin cuttings from the same young porkers from which White Lily Ham is taken. These are carefully graded, spiced and seasoning added and the meat is then ground to a perfect consistency. All ingredients are weighed—not guessed at—and thus White Lily Sausage is one of our featured products—not simply a by-product as sausage is regarded by many packers.

COST OF COKE STRIKE.

During the progress of the sympathy strike of the miners and coke workers in the Connellville region in 1922 it was well understood that very large sums of money were being spent by the United Mine Workers, which conducted and financed the strike. An army of organizers was sent into the region and no expense was spared in an effort to make the campaign effective. Although the members of the newly organized local unions were not eligible under the regulation of the international union to receive strike benefits, it became necessary, as a matter of policy, to provide relief of this character. This continued for a long period and involved very heavy expenditures.

All these things cost a large amount of money but the public was not altogether prepared to believe that approximately three-quarters of a million dollars was so spent by the international organization. That such was the cost is shown by the official report of International Treasurer William Greene.

This, it should be remembered, is the bare cost of conducting the strike, and does not include any part of the still greater cost to the workers through loss of wages during their illness. This cannot, of course, be figured as precisely as the cost of the business management of the walkout. Assuming, however, that an average of 10,000 men were idle for five months out of the seven through which the strike drew its weary length, and that their earnings would have averaged $5.00 per man per day, the loss in wages would have been $5,000,000 per day, or a total of $5,000,000 for the 120 working days in that period. The probability is that this estimate is much below, rather than above, the aggregate cost to the workers who, without demands for higher wages or compensation of any kind quit work at the behest of strangers, remained idle for months then went to work without any compensating advantages whatever.

ELIMINATING UN-AMERICAN TEXTBOOKS AND TEACHERS.

Investigations have become so frequent that they have ceased to attract as much public interest as formerly. Only rarely do they result in anything more than a large, and more or less useless, expenditure of public money.

An investigation is now in progress in Pennsylvania which is of the usual order in that it is not directed toward uncovering misconduct or malfeasance in public office, or designed to furnish political capital. For that reason, and that the object to be accomplished is of vital concern to the public schools of the state of Pennsylvania, this official inquiry should be of more than ordinary interest.

Complying with the provisions of a resolution passed by the last Legislature, a committee appointed by Governor Pinchot is making an investigation of the public school textbooks on United States history about which complaints have been made by several patriotic and veterans' organizations and citizens. It has been charged that these books belittled many of the famous characters and minimized many important events in American history, and other things of a wholly un-American and untruthful version of our history as it has previously been understood and taught.

The personnel of the committee gives assurance that a very careful investigation will be made of the charges. This body consists of Dr. C. E. Dickey, superintendent of the Allegheny county schools; Dr. C. H. Garwood, superintendent of the Harrisburg schools; Prof. H. M. J. Klein, of the history department of Franklin and Marshall College, Lancaster; Albert C. Meyers, a representative of the Historical Society of Pennsylvania; S. R. McClure, a Pittsburgh lawyer; Charles A. Coulomb, superintendent of District No. 1, Philadelphia; Dr. Helen B. Trimble, professor of history, East Stroudsburg State Normal School.

The method of procedure will be for the members of the committee to individually read the histories about which complaints have been made. A hearing of the complaining bodies and individuals will then be held following which the committee will formulate a report to be submitted to the 1925 session of the Legislature.

The fact that since the complaints have been made several publishers have eliminated many of the objectionable features in the new editions shows that the complaints were not without substantial basis. As the demand for the removal of every un-American textbook from the schools is backed by vigorous public sentiment, the work of the history investigation committee ought to result in a complete clean-up of books of this kind. But the good work should not

Short Talks on Advertising

NO. 27—MEMORY.

We are all prone to expect too much of advertising and to forget that it is only one cog in the business machine.

All of us, consciously or unconsciously, are hoping for an easy way to get results. We want some brilliant idea or fortunate accident to take away the necessity for the daily grind of hard work. We would much rather discover a gold mine than saw cord wood, but in advertising, as in mining, the net profit is frequently found in the tailings.

A good deal of advertising is done with no well-defined conception of what it is meant to accomplish. The prevalent and general thought is to increase sales. We put out the advertising and expect the sales to jump, but they cannot surely do so unless the advertising is keyed in and coordinated completely with the sales department and unless all the values are extracted.

But advertising can be made highly profitable even though it does not increase sales or decrease the percentage of selling cost. It can be made to equalize production and sales over longer periods of time. It can be made to strengthen the morale of the salesmen, so that while they may not sell any greater volume, they will secure better accounts. It can have the same sort of influence on credits and collections. It can furnish just the necessary additional nerve which will permit the discontinuance of unprofitable lines of business.

A properly conceived and properly executed plan of advertising can be made to accomplish any or all of these things, but the chief of them must not be overlooked. A single advertisement will not build successful business any more than one brick will make a chimney. Not everybody possesses the memory that will recall "Mr. Addison Smith of Seattle" after only one remote meeting. If we want people to remember us and our business, we must remind them frequently. And nothing offers so good or so economical a medium for such reminders as the daily newspapers.

Future Bright for Farmers

WASHINGTON, Feb. 11.—(Special correspondence).—That American farmers will in a very few years find an active demand for their live stock for replenishment of the depleted herds and herds of Europe is the opinion of former Congressman Sloan of Nebraska who has been extensively in Europe last summer and gave his attention chiefly to agricultural conditions rather than to national or international politics. Mr. Sloan is a stop there. If there are teachers whose attitude, sympathy and influence do not tend to stimulate a wholesome American spirit, pride and loyalty among the young people under their instruction, they should be eliminated as ruthlessly as the un-American textbooks are rooted out of the schools.

Coal Scale Prospects

American Metal Market.

On the eve of the initial conference on the bituminous coal mining scale, held at Jackson, Pa., Feb. 10, the issue of the conference has become somewhat less cloudy. It does not follow that the prospects are any less doubtful as to what will be the outcome. The coal industry has shown remarkable facility in developing causes for disagreement in the past quarter century, while the United Mine Workers has been a compact body, able to negotiate on more or less equal terms with the operators of the union bituminous mines. One time there was a suspension of several weeks duration, beginning April 1, on the subject of "permissible explosives." The state of Pennsylvania has enacted a law that only certain explosives could be used in gas mines. These explosives cost more money than the explosives the miners had previously been using, and the miners wanted the operators to stand the difference, while the operators wanted the miners to stand the difference. Hence a suspension until stocks were depleted. Another time agreement was held up by the matter of rents of miners' houses. The operators wanted rents to be raised and the miners did not. Hence a suspension. In both cases the issue was in the Pittsburgh district, it being the practice of the Pittsburgh district, or the central competitive field, including the Pittsburgh district, to reach an agreement first, scales for other fields being then derived from the scale agreed upon.

Technically, it was the refusal of the Pittsburgh district, two years ago, to negotiate as part of the central competitive field that prevented scale conferences before the strike of 1922. The district operators who announced this in December that they would not participate.

Inasmuch as the Pittsburgh operators will participate in the conference which has grown fairly clear that the chief issue will be the term for which an agreement is to be made. The United Mine Worker has come out in favor of a long term agreement, four or five years. Obviously this is based on the principle of rising on the crest of a wave of prosperity and high wages. The operators, on the other side, object even in the two-year period that until lately was the regular practice. They prefer one year, and point out that there really have been two one-year agreements as the latest thing. The Cleveland agreement which settled the 1922 strike was for a scale to April 1, 1923, and a trade over a year ago that agreement was renewed in April 1, 1921. Thus, the operators contend, if it is a matter of following precedent, the precedent is clear that bituminous coal mining scales should run for one year.

Of Interest to Fans.

Tomorrow night the Unity Fraternity Duckpin League will function again after being idle last week. With a two-week lay-off behind them the bowlers are ready to start things rolling snappily again tomorrow.

In a game at Perryopolis Saturday night, the Lion Tamers of this place and the Perry Independents played to an 18-18 tie. The game could not be continued because the Lion Tamers substituted list was so depleted by losses through elimination by the personal foul rule and by an injury to Mickey McCormick, that only four men remained with which to play the game.

The Cupetan Glass girls, playing at Scottdale Saturday against the Five Basketers, lost, after two extra periods, 9-8. The score at the end of the regular time was 7-7. At the close of the extra five minutes it was 8-8, and another period was necessitated.

lawyer and farmer at Geneva, Nebraska, and while a member of Congress was the author of the measures which provided for cooperation between the Federal Government and the several states in the eradication of hog cholera and of tuberculosis in live stock generally, which measures have been eminently successful. The cause of his special interest in agriculture and live stock production he visited American conditions and also the ministers of agriculture in Europe in an effort to ascertain all the facts of interest to American farmers relative to agricultural conditions.

Speaking of his observations Mr. Sloan says that, as in the case of all great wars from the beginning of history, the war in Europe resulted in the depletion of herds and flocks, and after the war, the people turned to their production of cereals as the easiest and quickest method of supplying their needs for food. Many of the vineyards in France have been plowed up in order that the soil might be sown to grain. As a result there has been a great increase in the production of cereals, particularly rye, barley and wheat, but there is still a great shortage in live stock.

Mr. Sloan found, also, that in European countries little systematic and effective work has been done for tuberculosis eradication. The only exceptions in continental countries are Holland and Sweden. He found that 27 per cent of the cows of Germany are tubercular, as also are 50 per cent of the dairy cows of Great Britain. The American consul general at Paris informed him that measures for the eradication of tuberculosis in France were so deplorable that the milk herds that the efforts had to be discontinued. The cattle of the continental countries visited were largely oxen and cows, the latter not used for producing calves and milk but also as burden bearers. The calves are being slaughtered in order to furnish veal at hotels and cafes to supply the demands of the tourist trade. Young cattle are scarce in all the continental countries visited.

Germany appearing to have more of this class than any other continental country.

Mr. Sloan expressed the opinion that, for the next two or three years, wheat, which can be raised in every degree of latitude and longitude in other temperate zones from cheap land, can not be produced in America to compete for European markets. He believes that the farmers of America, studying and carefully estimating the home supply, should produce the quantity which, fortified by a protective tariff, will give our wheat a fair return. Their chief enemies, however, should, in his opinion, be turned to the raising of live stock or feeds for live stock, so that when European affairs are somewhat settled and Europe turns to the task of replenishing the herds and flocks, the American farmer will be ready to supply the demands.

With American herds cleaned of tuberculosis there will be a good market in Europe, and, in Mr. Sloan's opinion, this will open the widest avenue for agricultural prosperity that this country has ever witnessed. Europe with her multiplied millions must have our meat for consumption and also our healthy animals for breeding purposes.

TRUE FRIENDSHIP.

Some like you for the things you own.
Some like you for the power you wield.
Be not deceived—the latter class
Has purposes wholly concealed.
Many will smile when skies are blue,
But friends to slanders the storms are few.

The growth of friendship true is slow;
Its roots deep in your life must grow.
Before the tree can bud and flower,
Look to the garden and do your part.
What blossoms quickly, early dies.

Put not your trust in every arm.
Give not your heart to all who call.
Look beneath the ruffled smile,
Who followed then, lead you should wait.

Who of the throng in victory's train,
Should falter forward, would remain?
Cherish your friendship! They are few,
And you shall learn this through the years.
Many will share life's joys with you,
But only true friends share your fears.
Sweet is man's factory, but be wise!
What blossoms quickly, soonest dies.

Dollar A Day Kept Love Away; Husband's Economy Ruled "Torture" By Court

MRS. GENEVIEVE KAISER.

BROOKLYN, N. Y.—Birds-eye maple furniture and cut-glass from Woodworth's spoiled her honeymoon "love nest" for Mrs. Genevieve Kaiser, 20 years old, and Supreme Court Justice Benedict agreed that this constituted "mental torture" and annulled the marriage.

"Every morning he put a silver dollar on the breakfast table for me to run the house on that day," related the bride. "For entertainment we went out walking. He put our silver away and bought 10-cent knives and forks to eat with, and when he left in the morning took out the electric globe so I couldn't turn the lights during the day."

When she had to go to her mother's to get enough to eat, she brought sun, Mrs. Kaiser said.

FELT "ALL GONE" IN HIS STOMACH

Wilkes-Barre Man Takes Paw Paw
And Finds Way Back to Health

"For many years I suffered from what may be described as 'all-gone feeling' in the pit of the stomach," says Charles Taylor, 161 State St., Wilkes-Barre, Pa.

"My appetite was very poor; my strength and vitality were leaving me. Nothing seemed to help me, even though I had many prescriptions compounded as given to me by physicians of high medical standing."

"One day, while in the drug store, I talked with the gentleman who is exhibiting Paw Paw Tonic and giving health talks on diseases common to every one. I became interested and explained my case to him."

"He suggested that I purchase a bottle of Paw Paw Tonic and take it according to directions. I gladly bought the Paw Paw because I was willing to try anything for relief. I faithfully took it for a little over a week and now report that my appetite is now first class."

"I have no trouble with my stomach or bowels. I feel, in fact, stronger in every way than in years. My vitality and general mental power have greatly increased, and I thank the Paw Paw Man for showing me a way to health."

This might just as well be your experience as that of Charles Taylor. Why don't you try Munyon's Paw Paw Tonic? It costs only $1 a bottle and you can get it at any first-class drug store. It is wonderful for indigestion, stomach troubles, lost energy, sleeplessness, loss of appetite, nervousness and general rundown condition. Buy a bottle TODAY! "There's a Munyon's Paw Paw Tonic," Scranton, Pa.

shook the bird. In getting two wild turkeys in one day he turned a feat in sportsmanship that any sharpshooter in the National Guard would have been glad to match. The former president of Meredith college, whose arms were lost when a boy, is a dead shot with a hammerless breach loader and a string tied to a trigger pulled by his teeth. It is doubtful if his match is on the earth.—Glenshire (N. C.) Daily News.

A Bit Foggy

The old gentleman was lost in a London fog, so thick that he could scarcely see his hand before his face. He became seriously alarmed when he found himself in a alley way. Then he heard footsteps approaching.

"Where am I going?" he asked anxiously.

A voice replied loudly from the darkness: "Into the river. I've just come out."—Everybody's Magazine.

A Serious Case

A notoriously absent-minded man was observed walking down the street with one foot continually in the gutter, the other on the pavement. A friend meeting him said: "Good evening. How are you?"

"Well," replied the absent-minded one, "I thought I was very well when I left home, but now I don't know what the matter with me. I've been limping for the last half hour."

Engagement Efficiency.

"It is true," said the young man, "that since you came here you have become engaged to Tom, Fred, Billy and Arthur, as well as to me!" The girl assumed an air of disdain. "What is that to you?" she demanded. "Just this," he replied briefly. "If it's no, and you have no objections, we fellows will all chip in to buy an engagement ring."

Threatening a Bolt.

"You will thunder down the ages," said the consultant with fulsome flattery. The great politician looked at him, perplexed. "Sometimes I imagine I'm going to thunder," he said.

Coughing only aggravates a cough

COUGHS are frequently due merely to irritation caused by a congested condition of throat and lung tissue. Persistent hacking will then only increase the congestion and continue the rough condition. Such coughs can and should be stopped at once because they are a futile waste of strength. Dr. King's New Discovery checks coughing quickly and without any bad after-effects. It quiets violent throat and lung spasms and gives the congestion a chance to clear away. It has an agreeable taste. All druggists.

ALSO WANT PUBLIC HALL

Special to The Courier.—MOUNT PLEASANT, Feb. 11.—As a result of the parent-teacher meeting held at the high school on Friday evening, Eugene Warden has been named chairman of a committee to report on the advisability of securing the three lots of the Rumbaugh plan on the school site. This is the old ground where football was played when the famous Mount Pleasant team of Adam Wynn was on the field.

Also as a result of the meeting there may be a public auditorium. M. A. King offered three ways that this may be secured. Of these one is to take the Duncan plan, with about 30 good citizens, into the thorough school. Second is to use the money raised for a memorial to the fallen heroes for this purpose and dedicate a memorial hall, this to be used not only for school purposes but public gatherings. Another solution would be the proposed log cabin for the Boy Scouts, with seating capacity for a public auditorium. This would be a one-story structure.

Armless Preacher Bags 2 Wild Turkeys in Day

Swinging a big wild young gobbler under his left armless sleeve and his gun under the right, Rev. Dr. Richard T. Vunn, affectionately known as the "armless wonder," walked into the Union station with his dinner.

The noted Baptist preacher winged his gobbler near Hobgood. Prior to plucking his turkeyship from the sides the clergyman downed another, but he did not boast of his sportsmanship in bagging the first. Evidently he gun-

Fur Jabots Come Into Prominence

Decoration of White Ermine Is Effectively Used by Paris Designer.

Examples of the art of costume design from two of the world's greatest dressmakers—Callot and Vionnet—are interesting. The Vionnet models illustrate new and clever variations of ideas which Vionnet herself introduced in the past and which have been so much played upon, not only by their originator, but by many other great dressmakers, that it would seem no one could evolve anything new from them. Nothing could be more charming, writes a prominent fashion correspondent, than Vionnet's use of the jabot made of white ermine. She likes the snowy pelt as a decoration for her simple black dresses. Her latest use of ermine is as a jabot, scarf and sleeve facings. The ermine jabot is a part of the dress, in reality being the facing of the double-breasted front, slit to form revers. The neck finishes with a straight scarf with ends hanging at the back or knotted in cravat style and pushed down under the jabot. This neck finish is very becoming and especially good on a dark dress.

which is given a decidedly wintry look through the use of the fur. The bell sleeves are deeply faced with ermine and are slightly rolled back. Some

FAMILY REMEDY FOR COLDS, BODY BUILDING

Father John's Medicine Treats Colds and Builds Up the Body. Contains No Alcohol or Dangerous Drugs. — 60 Years in Use.

Father John's Medicine is a doctor's prescription and was prescribed for the Rev. Father John O'Brien of Lowell, Mass., in 1865. Father John recommended this prescription to his parishioners and friends and in this way it became known as Father John's Medicine.

This old-fashioned food medicine makes flesh and strength for all the family and helps to build up energy to fight off cold and grip germs.

Father John's Medicine has a history of 65 years' success treating coughs, colds and throat troubles, and as a body-builder, guaranteed free from alcohol or dangerous drugs. Because of its health-building value Father John's Medicine is called "the greatest body-builder."

this maker, using the scarf and panel. Only an artist could think of continuing a panel section at the back and front in scarf ends to form a decoration for an extremely simple dress.

Vionnet develops one of her models in a heavy bronze green crepe satin. The back and front are exactly the same; one scarf end falls backward over the left shoulder, and the other forward over the right shoulder. Where the overlapping panels meet, back and front, there are finely pressed plaits, known as plait fingerings.

The most interesting thing in all of Vionnet's work is the way in which, through an extremely complicated cut, she achieves a very simple appearing frock. Her cape dresses are cut so that the cape is in one with the frock itself and not joined to it at the neck or shoulder seams. The ends of the cape may be wound about the frock to form a scarf, snail or jabot.

Vionnet makes coats having shoulder capes which may be converted into a scarf, or even with scarfs from which a cape effect may be achieved. Even her long, tight sleeves are cut with handkerchief points at the wrists which are knotted in scarf effect.

Dresses in two colors are typical of the models shown at the house of Vionnet this season as well as models made of two fabrics or a double-faced fabric in which both sides of the material are exploited. On another one of Vionnet's two-color dresses the two fabrics are joined at a low waistline in "Wall of Troy" design, Janusierable models of this kind are noted. One of the most popular combinations is that of red and black satin.

Similar models are shown in plain and printed velvets, silver cloth and silver net, and, of course, often in one fabric. At first glance one is not completely converted to this two-piece, two-fabric and two-color idea, as the line seems to break too abruptly. But as a matter of fact these dresses are becoming the rage because they are different. They first appeared at Biarritz and now Paris manifests strong interest. From these dresses have developed coats of almost exactly the same cut.

Dresses Are Simple in Line. Nothing could be more simple in line than some of Callot's new evening dresses. Likewise nothing more gorgeous from a standpoint of coloring and embroidery. Blue is Callot's favorite color this season, and she often uses three shades of this color to form a simple chemise dress which she elaborately embroiders in gold and red. Thus, while the dress in form is of the simplest possible cut, it is so embellished on the surface that it becomes at once ceremonious to the utmost degree.

One model illustrates the simple line as shown by Callot. The dress is a combination of camellia plaid and black velvet with very elaborate gold embroidery. The black contrasts strangely with the flesh of the wearer and it is so arranged that it forms a yoke and plastron for the bodice. The remainder of the dress is in the rose camellia plaid. The smartest of Callot's models carry the corset inside. The wearer considers herself dressed with a pair of sheer silk stockings, skin-tight culottes of crepe de chine or satin, and then the dress—that is all.

On a winsome dress of dyed lace and crepe from Callot the lace exactly matches the crepe, which is a soft mauve shade. It is a very popular model and is notably chosen by youthful matrons. The skirt is formed of a series of plaited fans of the crepe graduating in size and placed in panels of four to a group. The bodice shows a low berth-like yoke of the mauve lace and insertion panels running up and down the chemise foundation which supports the fan panels.

These little plaited fans are used by Cheruit with success on a silver dress, the fans being of silver net. Vionnet attaches these fans to each end, using them so long that they form the only garniture for a dress falling as they do from a low waistline almost to the skirt hem. With Vionnet they take more the shape of the closed fan than the open fan.

The house of Callot upholds in a most splendid manner its tradition for beautiful colors, gorgeous materials and magnificent embroideries. The Oriental note throughout this entire line is most pronounced.

Many of the extremely Oriental types of evening dresses are more or less fantastic adaptations from Spanish costumes. Few of the shockingly nude effects brought out in the fall are seen at this time. One sees less frequently the evening gown cut out under the arms to the waistline and the skirt draped so that the leg of the wearer shows almost to the knee.

Simple Frocks for Spring. The panel dress is still much in use; that is, the dress made of a series of tabs or panels, most of the panels elaborately embroidered in Persian or Chinese designs. The colors of these embroideries also are of the Orient. Among the Chinese designs many landscapes are seen. Frequently the dress is covered with embroidery showing pagodas, bridges and exquisitely wrought figures of Chinese people in brilliant dress who wander over the frock.

Daytime dresses for spring have a simplicity in both line and trimming that is very youthful. The length of the skirt remains about the same. The waistline in this type of frock is low and sleeves are long and tight fitting. Occasionally the sleeves show interesting trimming details, such as ruffles at the wrist or a simple but unusual white cuff. Some of the afternoon dresses have a fullness gathered directly in the front of the skirt. There are also a few models having skirts of circular cut, but these are invariably of a fabric so light in weight and so supple that the skirt falls in straight lines.

Vionnet continues to make her type of dress, which in itself apparently is of the simplest chemise form, but with a scarf end to form a jabot in the back and in the front.

Political Sickness. "I see Senator Smiley isn't going to run at the next election on account of sickness." "Sickness? Why, he looks hale and hearty to me." "Yes, but his voters are sick of him."

THE THREE BUCKAROOS—An original comedy-drama of the western range, is the leading attraction today and tomorrow at this theatre.

Partisan, an adventurous Nebraska boy, is attracted by the fame of three buckaroos who become known as 'The Three Buckaroos' who are hunted by the righteous but feared and detested by evil-doers and whose movements are as mysterious as those of the G-men of reconstruction days. He journeys forth to meet and join them, meeting with adventure aplenty including three successive challenges from the buckaroos, each for a pistol duel at the same time in the same place. On his way to capture in the latter he meets and falls in love with a girl. How he wins the admiration of the three buckaroos instead of fighting them, joins them in an oath which makes it impossible for him to speak his love to the girl leads the buckaroos to the annihilation of cattle rustlers who have been despoiling the girl's ranch until they are annihilated and he is released from his oath with the buckaroos makes a rapid fire story well worth seeing unfolded for one's self.

Wednesday and Thursday, 'Storm Swept' will be shown.

The Soisson

'MAIN STREET', on view today, Tuesday and Wednesday at this theatre, is a screen adaptation of the famous novel by Sinclair Lewis with Florence Vidor and Monte Blue supported by one of the greatest casts of character actors ever assembled. In the leading roles, 'Main Street' is the story of Carol Kennicott and her brave but patriotic efforts to make Crookshank Prairie a better place to live in. She is filled with ideas she wishes to put into practice. The inhabitants do not sympathize with her, even her husband Dr. Kennicott, is too engrossed in his medical practice to further his wife's plan. In despair she finds her only ally in Erik Vruborg, a young idealist. Two things happen. Vruborg begins waggling maliciously, and Erik finds himself so hopelessly in love with Carol that he wants her to elope. These situations bring on the dramatic climaxes to the picture. The picture is a masterpiece of picture-making, wherein the characters of the story live vividly. It is said that the producers spared no time or expense in giving the picture the best perfect touches, even going to the extent of studying Main Street conditions and peculiarities. Harry Beaumont, who directed the picture, is himself a Main Street product having been born in a small town.

Thursday, Friday and Saturday, an adaptation of the David Belasco stage play with Hope Hampton in the stellar role will be shown.

The Orpheum

'WEST OF THE WATER TOWER', a Paramount picture featuring Ernest Torrence, May McAvoy and Glenn Hunter, is the principal attraction today, Tuesday and Wednesday at this theatre. The story of 'West of the Water Tower' was written by Homer Gray. The novel appeared early this year and scored a literary sensation. It is a story which deals with small town folk in a masterly manner. Mr. Hunter, as Guy Plummet, son of a rigidly orthodox minister preying on the consciences of the town and loves Boo Chew, played by May McAvoy, daughter of a wealthy atheist. The young couple are secretly wed and this incident provokes a near tragedy which has its influence on the lives of the town. The picture is one that will live long in the memory of all who see it. Zasu Pitts featured as the other girl in the story, is admirable as are also all in the cast. Paramount is to be congratulated upon the beauty and charm of this delightful photoplay. There is nothing sensational in the makeup of the production. It is an absorbing story drawn from life and charmingly told. A film like 'West of the Water Tower' is rarely found. It is filled with humor, pathos and thrills happily blended.

Thursday, Friday and Saturday, William Farnum will be seen in 'The Gunfight'.

INSANE WOMAN CHAINED TO BED

Shrieks From Lonely Farm
Frighten French Villagers.

It was on the day of Toussaint, southern holiday which France celebrates to her dead, that the simple villagers of Chuzay, near Le Mans, became aware that their placid village harbored tragedy. They were gathered at the cemetery, laying their humble tributes reverentially on the mounds wherein their ancestors were buried, when cries of "Assassin!" sent the whole crowd scattering away.

It was about thirty-two years ago that the thirty-two-year-old father, daughter of old man Bommet, the alcoholic, and the old woman, his wife, in whom harmless superstition had long ago become a neurotic obsession, developed gradually through long days and nights of toil in the fields or in the cottage. For years the name of Bommet had been southern in change. For years no body who feared God had dared stand inside the whitewashed walls of Bommet's cottage.

But on this most somber day of the year their footsteps were drawn irresistibly toward the old man's house. Murmuring uneasily, they crowded around. From within came unearthly howls, cries of senseless, unmeaning despair. "Marie, c'est Marie!" they cried, and gladly moved away to let the gendarmes in.

Find Girl Chained to Bed.
Were Marie Zola, alive he would undoubtedly have incorporated the strange story of the Bommet farm in a new Rougon-Macquart series. For sheer horror the tale of the Bommet is rarely equaled these days. Marie was found chained to her bed by three great iron chains, uttering the terrible incoherencies of the insane. The old man was crying drunkenly. The old woman prayed. And all this at sunset on a day when the village dead are supposed to rise from their graves. No wonder the simple townsfolk were afraid, and lugged their whimpering children away from the solitary farm, with its thatched roof and shabby windows ominously barred.

The police took Bommet out, foaming, cursing, to the jail at Le Mans. On the way he pulled one of the heavy bars from out the window, as easily as if it had been paper. His wife prayed. The gendarmes seized her to make her give up the keys with which were fastened the chains that bound Marie to the bed. She only shook her head and prayed more.

Unable to Talk for Years.
Finally they loosed the unfortunate girl by filing away the chains. She could say nothing coherent. She hadn't been able to talk for years. Sitting on the bed, she nodded her head and giggled pitifully, all the time rubbing the great bruises which the iron had made on her thighs. Thirty-two she was, they said, though from her white face and staring eyes it was impossible to determine.

Presently the mother talked a little—enough for the quite rural officials, who themselves were apparently a bit awed by this wretched household, to learn that Marie had been insane 12 years. Thirteen years ago she had a young cavalier, with whom she used to go to village fetes and danced with on holidays. It was an innocent affair. After a time Marie went 11m away, telling her mother, with a peremptory shrug of her shoulders, that she was not yet ready to marry.

The young man left Chuzay, asking Marie please to let him know if she would reconsider. Then he would come back, he told her, as would any young man in love. A year passed and Marie never let him know. He married.

"It was a year later that he led a girl in Le Mans to the altar," muttered the mother, her eyes suddenly fixed on the stone floor. "She was one day out in the fields, sowing. Then the thing came. She wanted to run away, far, after some one."

Mother Tells of Fear.
Suddenly the old woman looked up fiercely, her small blue eyes gleaming. The persistent laughing monotone of Marie, nursing her scarred legs, seemed to inspire her to frenzy. Her voice became eager, like a child.

"She is not human, my Marie," whispered the old woman; "she is not one of us. She has visions. She knows what we do not. I might tell you. Always she wants to go away, away with her visions. When we put her on the bed and chained her it was to keep her from going to her friends there."

Escaped Twenty Times.

Marie had been chained to the bed three months. Before that 20 times she had escaped and 20 times she had been brought back by Bommet, found wandering bare-foot in the fields. Twice she had been taken to the insane asylum at Le Mans, but because the Bommet could not pay her board she had been sent back.

Once when Bommet wasn't drunk he had found the chains and the iron bars and put them in place. Then they had lifted Marie up to the bed, where for three solid months, according to her mother, she had wailed constant, driving the rest of them to the border line of insanity.

Bommet now is in prison. Marie is on the eve of entering the asylum once more, this time for good. The old woman has for the present the cottage to herself. Very much so since the whole townfolk stare clear of Marie's place. When they pass they pass with averted eyes.

High School Is Slow in Getting Under Way But Manages to Speed Up.

TWO GOALS FOR LOSERS

Getting away to a slow start against Latrobe High School Saturday night, the Connellsville High School basketball team, leader in the W. P. I. A. League, Section 3, found itself in the final quarter and with old time speed overran the visiting quint. The final score was 30-12.

During the entire game Latrobe secured only two field goals. During the first half Connellsville passing and shooting was erratic and there was much inactivity in the play of the team. In the final period, however, with the score standing at 19-9, the league leaders gave fans a treat in passing and shooting, bringing the result to 26-12. Latrobe scored three points in the first quarter, one in the second, five in the third and three in the fourth.

The half ended with the score at 10-4. During the intermission the local sectioned down and when the third quarter opened played a far better game. With a team far superior to that of the visitors, it seemed to be the hardest sort of thing for the "little wonders" to get moving. Shots would fall short, passes were fumbled and things generally looked blue. The last half brought out the sunshine, however, and now the team had only two more chances on its W. P. I. A. League schedule. To date the team has won seven and lost one game in the section. In the entire season, including pre-season games, the Cokers have won 20 and lost three.

There was a big crowd at the game. Connellsvillians are beginning to awake to the fact that they have a championship contender in their midst and are ready to pay homage to this organization. Fans who have not seen the Cokers in action cannot imagine their wonderful play, with lightning passes and breath-taking shots.

The lightest man on Latrobe's team was equal in weight to Connellsville's heaviest, but the Cokers have demonstrated very clearly before that size doesn't amount to anything against them.

The line-up:

Christian Juniors Beat Presbyterians

The Christian Church Juniors defeated Caskey's Five of the Presbyterian Church Saturday afternoon on the Christian arena by a score of 20 to 20. The game was featured by the good passing of both teams. Joe May and Wishart played best for the visitors. May made eight out of 10 attempts from the foul line. Bowser played a good offensive game for the Juniors while Stillwagon kept the Presbyterians from running up a large score by close guarding. The Juniors showed a decided improvement over the preceding Saturday when they were defeated by the Imperial Scholastics. The line-up:

PERRY HIGH SCHOOL LOSES FIRST GAME IN NEW GYM TO MONESSEN

Opening the new gymnasium at Perryopolis on Saturday night, the Perry High School team lost to Monessen High School by a single point. The final result was 21-20.

The home team played an up-hill battle throughout. Once Monessen was leading by nine points, but a steady offense gradually cut this down. At the opening of the final quarter the score was 16-25. In that time 10 minutes the visiting aggregation could not cage a single point and Perryopolis got two goals on fouls. It was one of the hardest-fought games ever witnessed at Perryopolis.

The line-up:
Perryopolis—30. Monessen—31.

"For the present, yes," was the guarded reply. "I trust that I have succeeded in setting these young gentlemen's minds at rest."

"There is one of them," Francis said gravely, "whose mind not even your soothing words could lighten."

Shopland had risen unobtrusively to his feet. He laid his hand suddenly on Fairfax's shoulder and whispered in his ear. Fairfax, after his first start seemed cool enough. He stretched out his hand towards the glass which as yet he had not touched, covered it with his fingers for a moment and drained its contents. The gently sarcastic smile left Sir Timothy's lips. His eyebrows met in a quick frown, his eyes glittered.

"What is the meaning of this?" he demanded sharply.

A policeman in plain clothes had advanced from the door. The manager hovered in the background. Shopland saw that all was well.

"It means," he announced, "that I have just arrested Mr. Robert Fairfax here on a charge of willful murder. There is a way out through the kitchen. Take his other arm, Holmes. Now, gentlemen, if you please."

There were a few bewildered exclamations—then a dramatic hush. Fairfax had fallen forward on his stool. He seemed to have slipped into a comatose state. Every scrap of color was drained from his sallow cheeks, his eyes were closed with a film and he was breathing faintly. The detective stretched up the glass from which the young man had been drinking, and smiled at it.

"I say, Mr. Grop a tablet in just now," Jimmy faltered. "I thought it was one of the digestion pills he uses sometimes."

Shopland and the policeman placed their hands underneath the armpits of the unconscious man.

"He's done, sir," the former whispered to Francis. "We'll try and get him to the station if we can."

The greatest tragedies in the world, provided they happen to other people, have singularly little effect upon the externals of our own lives. There was certainly not a soul in Soto's that night who did not know that Bobby Fairfax had been arrested in the bar below for the murder of Victor Hildlake, had taken poison and died on the way to the police station. Yet the same number of diners were ordered and eaten, the same quantity of wine drunk. The management considered that they had shown marvellous delicacy of feeling by restraining the orchestra from their usual musical gymnastics until after the service of dinner. Conversation, in consequence, buzzed louder than ever. One speculation in particular absorbed the attention of every single person in the room—why had Bobby Fairfax, at the zenith of a very successful career, risked the gallows and actually accepted death for the sake of killing Victor Hildlake, a young man with whom, so far as anybody knew, he had no quarrel whatever?

There were many theories, many people who knew the real facts and whispered them into a neighbor's ear, only to have them contradicted a few moments later. Yet, curiously enough, the two men who knew most about it were the two most silent men in the room, for each was dining alone. Francis, who had remained only in the hope that something of the sort might happen, was conscious of a queer sense of excitement when, with the service of coffee, Sir Timothy glass in hand, moved up from a table lower down and with a word of apology took the vacant place by his side. It was what he had desired, and yet he felt a thrill almost of fear at Sir Timothy's rambling words. He felt that he was in the company of one who, if not an enemy, at any rate had no friendly feelings towards him.

"My congratulations, Mr. Lednam," Sir Timothy said quietly. "You appear to have started your career with a success."

"Only a partial one," Francis acknowledged, "and as a matter of fact I don't think I have started in any new career. It was easy enough to make use of a duke and direct the intelligence of others towards the right person, but when the real significance of the thing still eludes you, one can scarcely claim a triumph."

Sir Timothy gently knocked the ash from the very fine cigar which he was smoking.

"Still your groundwork was good," he observed.

Francis shrugged his shoulders.

"That," he admitted, "was too to chance."

"I feel no exchange notes," Sir Timothy suggested gently. "It might be interesting."

"As you will," Francis assented. "There is no particular secret in the way I stumbled upon the truth. I was dining here that night, as you know, with Andrew Williams, and while he was ordering the dinner and I taking some friends I went down to the American bar to have a cocktail. Miss Fairfax and Fairfax were seated there alone and talking confidentially. Fairfax was insisting that Miss Hildlake should do something which puzzled her. She consented reluctantly, and Fairfax then hurried off to the street. Later on Miss Hildlake and the unfortunate young man occupied a table close to ours and I happened to notice that she made a point of leaving the restaurant at a particular time. While they were waiting in the vestibule she grew very impatient. I was reading behind them and I saw her dance at the clock just before she insisted upon her companion's going out himself to look for a taxi. Ergo, one inquiries at Fairfax's theater. For that exact three-quarters of an hour he is off the stage. At that point my interest in the matter ceases. Scotland Yard was quite capable of the rest."

"Disappointing," Sir Timothy murmured. "I thought at first that you were over-modest. I find that I was mistaken. It was chance alone which put you on the right track."

"Well, there is my story, at any rate," Francis declared. "With how much of your knowledge of the affair are you going to indulge me?"

Sir Timothy slowly revolved his brandy glass.

"Well," he said, "I will tell you this. The two young men concerned, Hildlake and Fairfax, were both guests of mine recently at my country house. They had dined here for one another a very fierce and reasonable antipathy with that recurrence to primitivism with which I have always been a hearty sympathizer they agreed, instead of going round their little world making sneering remarks about each other to fight it out."

"At your suggestion, I presume?"

Francis interpreted.

"I recommended that course and I offered them facilities for bringing the matter to a crisis. The fight indeed was to have come off the day after the unfortunate episode which anticipated it."

"Do you mean to tell me that you knew—?" Francis began.

Sir Timothy checked him quietly but effectively.

"I knew nothing," he said. "Except this. They were neither of them young men of much stomach and I knew that the one who was the greater coward would probably try to anticipate the matter by attacking the other first. If he could I knew that Fairfax was the greater coward—not that there was much to choose between them—and I also knew that he was the injured person. That is really all there is about it. My somewhat theatrical statement to you was based upon probability and not upon any certain foreknowledge. As you see, it came off."

"And the cause of their quarrel?" Francis asked.

"There might have been a hundred reasons," Sir Timothy observed. "As a matter of fact, it was the eternal one. There is no need to mention a woman's name, so we will let it go at that."

There was a moment's silence—a strange, unforgettable moment for Francis Lednam, who seemed by some curious trick of the imagination to have been carried away into an impossible and grotesque world. The hum of eager conversation, the popping of forks, the little curls of fenderlike laughter, all blended into one sound and unmusical choir, seemed to fade from his ears. He fancied himself in some subterranean place of vast dimensions, through the grim galleries of which men and women with evil faces, crept like animals. And towering above them, united in size, his scornful face an epitome of sin the knight which he wielded symbolical and ghastly, driving his motley flock with the leer of the evil shepherd was the man from whom he had already learned to recoil with horror. The picture came and went in a flash. Francis found himself accepting a courteously offered cigar from his companion.

"You see, the story is very much like many others," Sir Timothy murmured, as he lit a fresh cigar himself and leaned back with the obvious enjoyment of the cultivated smoker. "In every country of the world, the animal world as well as the human world, the male resents his female being taken from him. Directly he ceases to resent it, he becomes degenerate. Surely you must agree with me, Mr. Lednam?"

"It comes to this, then," Francis pronounced deliberately, "that you stage-managed the whole affair?"

Sir Timothy smiled.

"It is my belief, Mr. Lednam," he said, "that you grow more and more intelligent every hour."

Sir Timothy glanced presently at his thin gold watch and put it back in his pocket regretfully.

"Alas!" he sighed, "I fear that I must tear myself away. I particularly want to hear the last act of 'Louise'."

The new Frenchwoman sings, and my daughter is alone. You will excuse me."

Francis nodded silently. His companion's careless words brought a sudden dazzling vision into his mind. Sir Timothy scrawled his name at the foot of his bill.

"It is one of my axioms in life, Mr. Lednam," he continued, "that there is more pleasure to be derived from the society of one's enemies than one's friends. If I thought you sufficiently educated in the outside ways of the world to appreciate this I would ask if you cared to accompany me?"

Francis did not hesitate for a moment.

"Sir Timothy," he said, "I have the greatest detestation for you and I am firmly convinced that you represent all the things in life abhorrent to me. On the other hand, I should very much like to hear the last act of 'Louise', and it would give me the greatest pleasure to meet your daughter. So long as there is no misunderstanding—"

Sir Timothy laughed.

"Come," he said, "we will get out hats. I am becoming more and more grateful to you, Mr. Lednam. You are supplying something in my life which I have lacked. You appeal alike to my sense of humor and my imagination."

We will visit the opera together."

CHAPTER IX

The two men left Soto's together, very much in the fashion of two ordinary acquaintances saluting out to spend the evening together. Sir Timothy's Rolls-Royce limousine was in attendance, and in a few minutes they were threading the perilous of Covent Garden. It was here that an incident occurred which afforded Francis considerable food for thought during the next few days.

It was a Friday night, and one or two wagons laden with vegetable produce were already crowding their way through the difficult thoroughfares. Suddenly Sir Timothy who was looking out of the window, pressed the button of the car, which was at once brought to a standstill. Before the footman could reach the door Sir Timothy was out in the street.

For the first time Francis saw him angry. If eyes were blazing, his voice—Francis had followed him at once into the street—shook with passion. His hand had fallen heavily upon the shoulder of a huge carrier who, with whip in hand, was belaboring a thin scarecrow of a horse.

"What the devil are you doing?" Sir Timothy demanded.

The man stood at his questioner and the instinctive antipathy of rare vibration in his peculiar reply. The carrier was a beefy-faced, untidy-looking brute, but powerfully built and with huge shoulders. Sir Timothy, straight as a dart without overcoat or any covering to his thin evening clothes, looked like a stripling in front of him.

"I'm whippin' 'em if yer want to know," was the carrier's reply. "I've got to get up the hill, 'scent I? Gam and mind yer own business."

"This is my business," Sir Timothy declared, laying his hand upon the neck of the horse. "I am an official of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals. You are laying yourself open to a fine for your treatment of this poor brute."

"Till lay yer eye upon fer a fine for the treatment of 'n' thing else. I've don't did out of yer 'own,' the carrier retorted, throwing his whip back into the wagon and coming a step nearer. "Dyer 'ear? I don't want any swells interfere with my business. You 'up it. Is that strite enough? 'Op it quick!"

Sir Timothy's anger seemed to have abated. There was even the beginning of a smile upon his lips. All the time his hand creased the neck of the horse. Francis noticed with amazement that the poor brute had raised its head and seemed to be making some faint effort at reciprocation.

"My good man," Sir Timothy said, "you seem to be one of those brutal persons unfit to be trusted with an animal. However—"

The carrier had heard quite enough. Sir Timothy's tone seemed to madden him. He clenched his fist and rubbed in.

"You take that for interference," he big toff," he shouted.

The result of the man's effort at pugilism was almost ridiculous. His arms appeared to go round the windmills beating the air. It really seemed as though he had rushed upon the point of Sir Timothy's knuckles, which had suddenly shot out like the piston of an engine. The carrier lay on his back for a moment. Then he staggered violently to his feet.

"Don't," Sir Timothy begged, as he saw signs of another attack. "I don't want to hurt you. I have been amateur champion of two countries. Not quite fair, is it?"

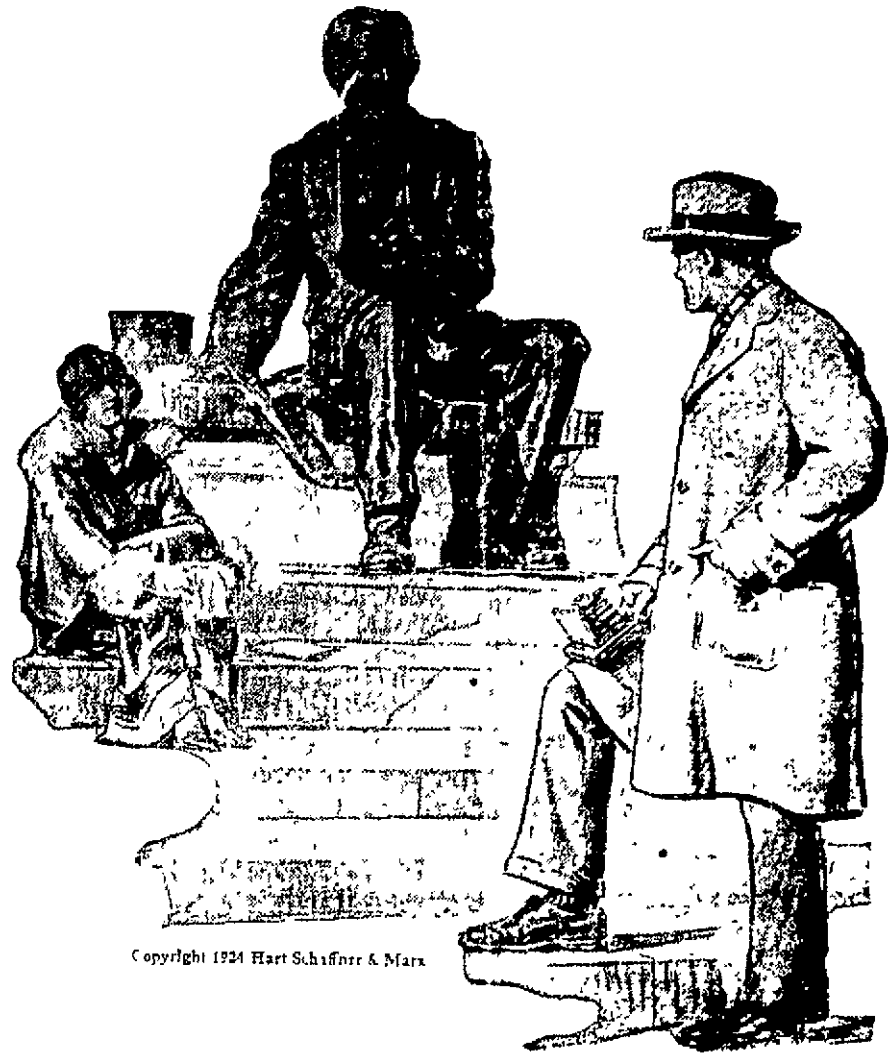

"Vot d'yer want to come interfere with a chap's business fer?" the man

"You 'Op 'em—That Strite Enough? 'Op It Quick!"

growled, dabbing his cheeks with a filthy handkerchief but keeping at a respectful distance.

It happens to be my business also, Sir Timothy rolled. "To interfere whenever I see animals ill-treated."

THE inspiration of the great consecration of this heroic citizen will never grow less, as the years pass, because the need of such consecration is ever present

Now I don't want to be unreasonable. That animal has done all the work it ought to do in this world. How much is she worth to you?"

"That's all," he said, "ain't what she was, it's true, but there's a lot of work to do yet. She may not be much to look at but she's worth forty quid to me—say and one to split on!"

Sir Timothy counted out some notes from the pocketbook which he had produced, and handed them to the man.

"Here are fifty pounds," he said. "The mare is mine."

He called over his footman and directed him to unharness the animal and take it to his private stable, in town.

The man touched his hat and hastened to commence his task. Sir Timothy turned to Francis. "We might walk the last few yards, Mr. Lednam," he said.

The latter acquiesced at once, and in a moment or two they were in the opera house.

Margaret Hilditch, her chair pushed back into the recesses of the box, scarcely turned her head at her entrance.

"I have brought an acquaintance of yours, Margaret," the latter announced, as he hung up his hat. "You remember Mr. Lednam?"

Francis drew a little breath of relief as he bowed over her hand. For several times now to rehearse some scene had been rehearsed. She was her usual calm and self-reliant almost immediately, but the gleam of surprise and the faint red of unpleasant surprise, had been unmistakable.

"Ah, you a devotee, Mr. Lednam?" she asked.

"I am fond of music," Francis answered, "especially this opera."

She motioned to the chair in the front of the box, facing the stage.

"You must sit there," she insisted. "I prefer always to remain here, and my father always likes to face the audience. I really believe," she went on, "that he likes to catch the eye of the journalist who writes little gossip items and to see his name in print."

"But you yourself?" Francis ventured.

"I fancy that my reasons for preferring seclusion should be obvious."

"My daughter is inclined, I fear, to be a little morbid," Sir Timothy said, settling down in his place.

Francis made no reply. A triangular conversation of this sort was almost impossible. The members of the orchestra were already climbing up to their places, in preparation for the overture to the last act. Sir Timothy rose to his feet.

"You will excuse me for a moment," he begged. "I see a lady to whom I must pay my respects."

Now Feels Like New Woman After Years of Sickness.

Dreco Succeeds Where Other Medicines Fail in Giving Woman Health

What is this life without good health? A very dreary uninteresting place, as everyone bothered with liver or stomach trouble will agree. But their life is avoidable. There is no reason why any man or woman should suffer from stomach or liver trouble. These vital organs can be made and kept well, as the case of Mrs. Margaret Drossell of Trueter, Pa. proves.

"For the past few years I have been in a rundown condition," says Mrs. Drossell. "My stomach was always out of order, I had no appetite for food. I was very nervous, and my liver was in such a condition that my entire system was perpetually poisoned."

"Medicines and doctors did not seem to do me any good. I started taking Dreco. The failure of other medicines only made the success of it more marvelous."

"Four bottles of this medicine made a new woman of me. My liver was put in good condition and my stomach stopped bothering me. It is the one medicine that anyone bothered with stomach or liver trouble should take. It is certain to bring relief to everyone else just as it has to me."

Dreco is made from the pure, unadulterated, diets of twelve remarkable plants, roots, barks and leaves. Scientifically blended by the Dr. H. H. Fulton Co. Laboratories of Baltimore. They act directly on the stomach, liver, kidneys, bowels and blood, and tend to relieve constipation, headaches, rheumatism, catarrh, biliousness, dizzy spells, heart fluttering, gas on stomach and other troubles.

Dreco is being specially introduced by Connellsville Drug Company and sold by druggists everywhere. Also for sale by Holtzman's Drug Store in Scotland, Pa.—Advertisement.

Motor Federation Urges Distributing Stations in Handling Tags, Licenses

HARRISBURG, Feb. 11.—A radical change in the present method of distributing automobile tags and drivers' licenses is strongly urged by the Pennsylvania Motor Federation in a letter received by Secretary Paul D. Wright of the Department of Highways.

This action by the federation is the result of a storm of protest against the present system from motor club officials and members in every part of the state. Similar suggestions were made by the same or, in part, about a year ago but were not pressed. The letter to Secretary Wright follows:

"In view of the widespread dissatisfaction among motorists arising out of the workings of the system of tag and license distribution, we deem it wise to again invite your attention to a plan for establishing a number of distributing stations in the principal cities of the Commonwealth."

"When our legislative committee took up this matter at a recent session, we were not convinced of the desirability or practicality of the plan but it is our hope that you may now be prepared to reconsider your decision."

"Without in any way reflecting on the efficiency of your motor vehicle division and with full appreciation of the many difficulties encountered by the registrar in putting into effect the new title law, we are still of the opinion that the central distributing system for tags and licenses is not only cumbersome and archaic but is itself responsible for much of the trouble complained of by you, registrar and for which he is blamed to hold the public responsible."

"The vexatious delays caused by slight irregularities in filling out forms would be largely eliminated if it were possible for applicants to personally go to the department. It is not just to blame the public for misunderstanding printed instructions. We know of many highly intelligent men who are still ignorant of the requirements regarding operators' licenses."
